SCM World Announces World-Class Speakers for Global Summit Focused on Developing Supply Chain Talent

LONDON (June XX, 2015) – SCM World, the supply chain talent development partner for the world's leading companies, is pleased to announce its groundbreaking lineup of speakers for the Fast-Forward Supply Chain Capability Forum in Chicago on July 8-10, 2015. The notable panel of supply chain and human resource leaders will address the challenges of finding and developing talent within supply chain industries.

The speakers include:

- Ferran Raurich, Senior Vice President of Human Resources for Schneider Electric;
- Jackie Sturm, Vice President & General Manager of Global Supply Chain Management for Intel;
- Tiffanie Boyd, Vice President of Human Resources for General Mills;
- Jim Hardy, Chief Supply Chain Officer for Under Armour;
- John Church, Executive Vice President of Supply Chain for General Mills;
- D.G. Macpherson, Senior Vice President and Group President of Global Supply Chain & International for Grainger;
- Ann Lundy, Vice President of Supply Chain Strategy for Mattel;
- Huey Wilson, Senior Vice President of Human Resources and Global Supply Chain for Mattel; and
- Kevin O'Marah, Chief Content Officer for SCM World.

"As baby boomers retire, talent acquisition for supply chains has become more difficult and a top area of focus for company leaders," said Oliver Sloane, CEO of SCM World. "We created an event where our unrivalled speakers of senior executives from some of the world's leading companies can come together to discuss what's causing the talent shortage and potential strategies and solutions that will improve supply chains for future generations."

The closed-door, cross-industry forum is the first in the world dedicated exclusively to the task of unbundling the supply chain talent management problem.
